

Devoted to our community and ecosystem, Kelly Hagen is a long-time panhandle resident and environmental advocate. Driven by causes close to heart and home, her roles as Vice Chair on the City of Pensacola's Environmental Advisory Board, President of the Council of Neighborhood Association Presidents of Pensacola (CNAPP) and President of the Sanders Beach Neighborhood Association have led to expanded protections on Pensacola's Heritage trees, advanced stifled progress on neglected superfund sites, raised awareness for local causes and inspired involvement by example.

With a penchant for immersive travel and community health, Kelly completed her Bachelor's in International Studies with a minor in Journalism from UWF while in Brazil, and is Certified in both Permaculture Design and Nutritional Therapy. Her affection towards the people of Pensacola and love of the outdoors means there's also a good chance you'll find her & her partner biking around downtown with their energetic baby boy, striking up conversation at a local brewery, playing competitive doubles beach volleyball, or balancing on a slackline in Seville Square.
